

Our Values and Principles

1. Everyone who stands behind our values and principles is welcome to join our network. We are working actively to make this platform a safe and accessible one.
2. Inclusivity is at the core of our movement, and we aim to create a space that is empowering and fun.
3. Even though we are not experts, we know enough about the climate crisis, the impact of the aviation industry, and the academic world to be able to ask for change.
4. We understand that flying is still an important part of education, so, for now, our aim is not to make institutions flight free, but we ask them to be conscious of their travel choices.
5. We want the experience of being part of this network to be educational and inspiring. We don't look down on each other's mistakes, we help each other, we reflect and we learn.
6. Our network is committed to nonviolent communication and actions, and we don't tolerate any type of violence to achieve change.
7. We recognise the intersectionality of the climate crisis, and work with justice at our core.
8. We strive for an academic world that is fair and just, where everyone has the opportunity to receive quality education, and where universities are actively anti-racist and work to decolonise.
9. We stand in solidarity with communities most impacted by climate change, racism, and the travel industry.
10. We want institutions to take real action, we won't stand for talk and empty promises.
